Astronauts Fight Cold,

Prepare for Re-Entry

SPACE CENTER, Houston, April 16 (UPI).—The Apollo-13 astronauts passed the halfway mark home today with their patched-up spaceship on true course and their reserves of oxygen, water, power and fuel holding up well.

Optimism both in space and on the ground was growing that

Capt. James A. Lovell ir. and his two crewmates, Fred W. Haise jr. and John L. Swigert jr., would safely splash down in the Pacific at 1808 GMT Friday. "It's going a lot better than we ever expected," reported Capt. On the day Capt. Lovell and Mr. Haise had hoped to be walking on the moon, the lunar lander Aquarius was still linked to the command module, Odyssey, as they went past the midway

Chief astronaut Donald K. Slayton said Apollo-13 would probably try to hold on to Aquarius until about an hour before scheduled splashdown.

'Beautiful Shape' "If things keep going the way they are, we're in beautiful shape," Mr. Slayton said. "But you can't discount the fact that something else might (go out) on you before you get home."

Mr. Slayton said re-entry itself was "not really difficult, but the problem is one of integrating all of these procedure into a reasonable time line-it's the time it takes to do them and the

Splashdown Weather Outlook Good

HOUSTON, April 16 (AP),-The spaceflight weather center at mission control here said today that weather conditions will be acceptable for Apollo-13's landing in the Pacific tomor-

It says skies in the planned recovery area will be partly cloudy and there will be widely scattered showers. Easterly winds at 15 knots and seas of about four feet are expected in the splashdown area, with the temperature about 75. The weather center said the weak tropical storm Helen is expected to be about 500 miles west of the recovery area and should not affect the landing or recovery of Apolio-13.

The Honolulu weather buresu says Helen still carries winds up to 25 knots, but these seem to be diminishing with the storm pattern breaking up.

Meanwhile, the aircraft carreach the prime splashdown area at 1500 Greenwich mean time, or about three hours before the expected splashdown. The Air Force said a large

Rocket Crash Made Moon 'Ring Like a Bell' for 4 Hours

By Victor Cohn

WASHINGTON. April 16 (WP).—The moon "rang like e bell" for four bours Tuesday night when Apollo-13's booster rocket smashed into it, triggering the greatest man-made moonquake to date.

The crash of the empty rocket casing 80 miles from the seismometer left by Apollo-12 was planned months ago as Apollo-13's first scientific experiment. With no moon landing, it becomes the only one.

Dr. Gary Latham. e seismologist, said yesterday in Hous-ton—where signals from the Apollo-12 instrument have been received regularly since No-vember—that the signal Tuesdey was much larger than ex-

The sound waves apparently penetrated at least that deep before returning to the surface. The signals also seemed to show that if the moon has e molten or once-molten inner core, it must be deeply buried. The selsmometer recorded no variation in signals to indicate ing material. These initial conclusions back up the fact that the Apollo-13 experiment has provided one of the most important sets of raw dats thus far about the still largely unknown moon.

Lunar seismology began with the first lunar landing last July. when Apollo-11 astronauts left a seismometer that worked only for one day. The Apollo-12 crew left a much more sensitive seismometer with more rugged instrumentation.

On Nov. 20, after leaving the moon, the empty lunar module of Apollo-12 was crashed into the lunar surface. Startled scientists noted e "very positive, very long-lasting event," an artificial moonquake "unlike any that any of us have ever seen on the earth."

For the Apolio-13 experiment, scientists anticipated a louder joit and one longer than the 55 minutes recorded in November. The big Saturn-5 rocket was to hit the moon with the impact of 11 tons of TNT-11 times greater than the lunar module's jolt.

The rocket hit on schedule. But then it built up from s modest start to a signal 20 to 30 times greater than the November signal.

"Now." said Dr. Latham, "we ell have to go back to scratching

Scientists concluded in November that shock waves were trapped in a loose, rubbly gravel "sandwich," producing a signal that traveled readily through the icose gravel and bounced back and forth between two lava layers. The two-layer idea was later dropped, but the notion remained that the signal was rapidly scattered and repropagated in a deep iunar

Dr. Lathern pointed out. however, that this did not explain why there was such a fast buildup on the Apollo-13 signal, "One possibility is that coupling of energy was more efficient," he said. "The LEM struck at a very shallow angle. The rocket came in nearly vertically."

"It's still possible that the signal is scattered in a rubble. But the answer has to involve more," he added.

The big disappointment, said Dr. Latham, is that Apollo-13 did not land and leave still another seismometer for the beginning of a seismic "net-

If Apollo-13 missed the corridor and came in at a too-shallow angle, the said while would obtain a said of the corridor and came in at a too-shallow angle, the ship would skip away from earth. If it came in at too steep an angle, the ship could be damaged or destroyed.

Later, mission control said the astroneuts would have to make a tiny course correction at 1253 GMT Priday to fine-time their aim on their splashdown target. The maneuver would be made with small steering rockets and elow the craft just one Flight director Glynn Lunney told a news conference, how-ever, that Apollo-13 is in "a comfortable trajectory" and that the Friday course correction was not ebsolutely necessary. He said it might make the crew happier to do it because it would put them on a re-entry path they were more familiar with. When told the entry angle was a good one. Capt. Lovell replied, "Yeah, that sounds pretty good. We're getting in there." A seal in a lunar module helium tank burst as expected early today and engineers for a while thought that the escaping gas might affect Apoilo-13's trajectory. They later determined that it had no effect, but the gas did start the spaceship revolving "It'e a little annoying," reported Mr. Swigert. But he said the constant spinning was not uncomfortable. The revolving interfered with radio communications periodically as the antennae pointed away from earth.

Apollo-13 had been farther off course than any other returning moonship. Without Thursday morning's maneuver, the astronauts would have missed the earth by more than 100 miles and sped off in a distant orbit in which they would have been

The astronauts tested one of the two main electrical distribotion systems in the command module late Wednesday and found it worked. This was a boon to plans to use power from the hunar module to charge the command module's batteries before

Mr. Kraft said the operations just before Apollo-13 splashes into the aimosphere Friday still would be tight, and require precise piloting on the part of the astronauts. They will jettison their damaged service module and their life-saving lunar module before riding the cone-shaped command module into the atmosphere.

Recovery Ship En Route

The aircraft carrier Iwo Jima steamed to the splashdown point 630 miles south-southeast of Pago Pago and about 3,200 miles "I hope they split that carrier right down the old flight deck," Mr. Griffin said.

The mission control center et Houston was jammed for the critical course correction Thursday morning, but one man noticeably ebsent was Lt. Comdr. Thomas K. Mettingly. Doctors said a rise of lymph cells was noticed in his blood and this could be a preliminary symptom of German measles Mr. Swigert replaced Comdr. Mattingly a day before Apollo-13's launch from Cape Kennedy last Saturday. Comdr. Mattingly had been exposed to German measles, and doctors feared he would get sick this week when he should have been orbiting tha moon. Capt. Lovell and Mr. Halse were to have set out on the first of two field trips today in a hilly stretch of moon terrain called Fra Mauro. They would have remained on the lunar surfece until Friday and they were due back under normal mission plans to a Facific splashdown next Tuesday.

As Apollo-13 sped eway from the moon Wednesday night,

Mr. Haise looked back and seld wistfully, "Well, there's the old terminator (sunsbadow line) at Fra Mauro. "We would have landed there two hours ago."

Next Critical Period for Apollo-Re-Entry

SPACE CENTER, Houston, April 16 (AP).— Barring a new major problem, the next critical period for the Apollo-13 spececraft will be in the hours before re-entry Friday.

Before re-entering the atmosphere, the astronauts must discard two sections of their space train-a powerless service module and the lunar module, which has been their lifeboat since the command ship was crippled by an oxygen tank rup-ture Monday.

In the months of training leading up to Apollo-13, the crew and the directors flew dozens of simulated flights in which every conceivable emergency short of absolute catastrophe was made to happen to the spaceship.

Simulated Experience

"This current mission, with a loss of power on the command module while the LEM flunar excursion module) is still attached, was flown many times in the simulators," a National Space and Aeronautics Administration technician said.

"When the explosion happened Monday night, the crew had started to climb into the LEM even before the flight director told them to, they were so familiar with what probably would happen_

"If this crew gets back, it will be because of the absolute faith the crew and the directors have in each other." In making the life-or-death decisions, the four flight directors, who work in shifts, rely heavily on dozens of flight controllers and a bank of five 20-foot-long computers. During a space flight, the computers will receive millions of bits of information radioed automatically from space.

After digesting and correlat-ing the data, which is done almost instantly, the computer is prepared to spew out situation reports on almost anything connected with the flight that the flight director and his assistants might desire.

Experts Seek Crisis Cause Of Apollo-13

'Foreign Matter' In Oxygen Suspected

HOUSTON, April 16 (UPI).— Erigineers investigating events leading to Apollo-13's emergency in space believe "some start of foreign matter" in an oxygen tank may have heated the gas until something burst, informed sources said today. The highly placed space agency sources said many members of a hand-picked group of investigators reached this con-clusion while trying to deter-mine the condition of the Apollo-13 service module, where the explosion occurred Monday

"We started looking right away at the probable condition of the service module with no intention of using it again but to establish what its effect would be on conditions of recovery of the astronauts, one source said.

Many members of the team believe some oxygen-system component is the most likely source. They reached this con-clusion while trying to deter-mine the sequence of events. "Although a meteoroid im-pect can't be excluded as a possibility," one source said, "some of those engineers think a probable cause of the original event could have been a reaction between oxygen and some sort of foreign matter—the na-ture of which has not been determined—in the tank itself. which heated the oxygen at a rate which led the pressure to rise faster than the relief valve could contain it.

"They feel this caused the rupture of a yet-to-be-identified component—tubing, a fitting, a vaive or the oxygen tank itself—which carried away adjacent redundant systems, resulting in the loss of all three fuel-cell systems."

Sudden Drop

Telemetry data recorded just before and during the accident showed e rapid rise in pressure in one liquid-oxygen tank, followed by a very sudden drop of pressure in that tank to zero. He said the second tank's oxygen pressure bled down to zero in about three hours.

Such an explosive rupture and resulting shrapnel could have ripped away wires, pipes, joints and instruments in the crowded equipment bay No. 4 of the serv-

The oxygen system aboard the command chip's service is complex. Each of the service module oxygen tanks started out containing 326 pounds of oxygen, comparessed into a supercold liquid state.

As this oxygen is heated, it becomes a gas and expands.

The oxygen is stored in round, double-walled nickel-eteel tanks with an outside diameter of 26 inches. Each wall is six-hundredths of an inch thick, with the space between them insulated by paper matting, fiberglass, aluminum foll

Radioactive Box On Apollo Heads For Davy Jones

HOUSTON, April 18 (WP). The only thing to remain intact when the lunar module Aquarius burns up as it re-enters the earth's atmosphere tomorrow will be a 40-pound package con-taining radioactive plutonium. The plutonium, which would heve been used to power scienti-fic experiments on the moon, enclosed in a cask especially designed to remain intact in case the mission ended without a moon landing.

An official said the projected splashdown points prime and alternates—are all in deep water and the cask of radioactive material will sink to the bottom of the ocean. He said It is unlikely that it will ever be recovered or that it will spread radioactivity.

Radio Silence To Aid Apollo

LONDON, April 16 (UPI) .-Governments across Europe have agreed to a partial radio blackout tomorrow to prevent the possibility of interferences of communications with the Apollo-13 spacecraft.

In London, a spokesman for the General Post Office said Britain had agreed to cancel certain frequencles until tha splashdown after a request from the U.S. Embassy. The Italian Postal Ministry said it will interrupt radio-telephone communications on some frequencies to avoid possible interference with rescue operations, and Radio Czechoslovakia said it will avoid using certain radio frequencies,

In Paris, a spokesman for the Foreign Ministry said all technical authorities had been notified to guard against interfer-ing with communications between the American ground space control and the descend-ing spacecraft.

The command also reported 28 Americans killed and 69 wounded in yesterday's fighting, the costliest one-day toll since the enemy's spring offensive began April 1.

Ponrteen of the Americans died and 32 were wounded in what military spokesmen called the worst booby-trap incident of the Vietnam war.

An American 105 mm. artillery shell rigged by the Viet Cong as a booby trap exploded late yesterday when it was triggered by a soldier moving with his unit over a hilltop near the South China Sea, 305 miles northeast of Saigon. The blast set off mortar shells carried by other infantrymen.

Viet Cong and North Vietnamese gunners maintained a high level of shellings across Vietnam last night and early today, bombarding 42 allied targets. Fifteen of the attacks were against American units. One American was killed and ten wounded, military spokesmen said.

U.S. spokesmen said the American air attack on Cambodian territory knocked out a guerrilla 82-mm, mortar position atter Communist gunners had hit a South Vietnamese civilian defense group position near the border.

Blackmun: A Favorable First Impression

The sorry truth about the strategic arms limitation talks (SALT) that have resumed in Vienna is that hopes for halting the unclear missile race ride for the moment with the Soviet delegation.

President Nixon reportedly has decided to reject the resolution voted by three-fourths of the Senate urging him to propose an immediate Soviet-American moratorium in the further deployment of offensive and defensive strategic weapons and in the flight-testing of MIRV multiple warhead missiles. Unless Moscow now makes a straightforward public proposal to freeze the nuclear balance at present parity levels while negotiations proceed, the continuing missile race will multiply manyfold the numbers of strategic delivery vehicles on both sides.

Soviet Communist leader Leonid Brezhnev this week said that prospects for the talks will be favorable "If American opinion succeeds in overcoming resistance by the arms manufacturers and the military." But the fact is that the resistance of the Nixon administration to a missile freeze will be difficult to overcome as long as it can argue that the Soviet Union is not prepared to forgo either defensive anti-ballistic missiles (ABM) or offensive MIRV multiple warheads. On the contrary, a clear Soviet proposal to ban both weapons and halt further deployment of ICBMs might insure a Senate cutoff of ABM and MIRV appropriations while the proposal is being explored.

The central issue that faces the SALT

the Supreme Court. In the process, he has fact is that geography has little to do with the work of the Supreme Court. And geo-negotiators is whether to halt further expansion of strategic weapons on both sides or to fix higher ceilings on some weapons to permit completion of ongoing programs and even let some weapons run free.

Unilateral verification of a missile freeze admittedly may fail to detect some violations. But an uncontrolled arms race involves far more risk than the possibility of undetected violations of a unilaterally verified missile freeze. Moreover, violations extensive enough fundamentally to alter the strategic balance would be detected in time for countermeasures, in the opinion of the Central Intelligence Agency and former Pentagon and presidential science advisers. One of these authorities, Dr. Wolfgang Panofsky of Stanford, has argued persuasively that a small step in arme limitation may be both harder to negotiate and more risky than a large step.

"The more far-reaching the prohibition of the SALT treaty, the less important the question of cheating becomes," he said in a recent lecture. "A freeze of the 'status quo' at present levels of strategic armaments is easier to police than a treaty specifying agreed numbers of components (missiles, radars, etc.) of permitted strategic systems. It is easier to recognize changes than to interpret in detail what is discovered."

The moment clearly calls for thinking big, not small. The chief question at Vienna is whether the Nixon and Brezhnev administrations are capable of it.

But the Russians argue their country comes directly under the potential firing pattern of thousands of U.S. nuclear warheads made available to NATO, stationed in Europe and described as tactical, whereas the United States itself can only be hit back by ultralong-range weapons, planes, landbased missiles or sea-based missiles borne to launching range by accord on power relationships before any balance can be discussed. There must be agreement on what is being talked about before there can be agreement on any freeze of existing weapons systems, much less their removal.

This is not only a military matter but a political one. It relates di-rectly to the implied threat each superpower feels itself under à-vis the other, and also to the protection accorded by each superpower to its own allies.

Precise definitions are imperative preconditions to either arms reduction or limitation because each side must know what the other means. However, judging by the contortions of internal Soviet politics right now, the delegations meeting in Vienna will have plenty of time to discuss the meaning of meaning before any moment for diplomatic action can be deemed ripe.

Brandt's East Policy And U.S. Relations

By John M. Goshko

opponents, probing for targets in his attempt to improve relations with Eastern Europe, have started to zero in on the question of how this affects U.S.-West German ties. For the past month, the political opposition here has slowly been crystallizing a line of attack centered on the contention that Brandt's Eastern policy does not really enjoy the confidence of That this approach is now building up steam was underscored Wednesday when Brandt gave the Bundestag a brief report on his meeting with President Nixon in Washington last week.

As one German newspaper commented, his speech "contained no new information," and was notable mainly because it provoked a heated exchange between the leader of Brandt's Social Democratic party in the Bundestag, Herbert Wehner, and the parliamentary floor leader for the Christian Democratic opposition, Rainer

What seemed to touch off the name-calling duel was the persistence of Barzel and other Christian Democratic deputies in citing U.S. press reports implying that the Nixon administration has doubts about Brandt's multi-pronged series of negotiations with Eastern European countries.

In recent days, the Christian Democrats and their press allies have been placing heavy stress on reports from Washington pointing out that Mr. Nixon failed to issue a public commendation of Brandt's Eastern policy.

In addition, a stir has been caused here by a New York Times editorial [published in yesterday's Herald Tribune] contending that Boon's efforts "have been greeted with public coolness and private questioning in Washington." This editorial was specifically cited by

'Light Already Green' In his Bundestag speech, Brandt insisted that he has "the understanding, support and trust" of Mr. Nixon despite the absence of public endorsement. Moreover, added, those who think he went to Washington in hopes of ob-taining a "green light" for his Eastern policy are mistaken be-cause "the light was already green when I arrived for the talks." In the view of many analysts here, this growing debate about the U.S. attitude is prompted by what seems to be a Nixon ad-attack or to defend Branch Privately, U.S. officials but here and in Washington have presented a unanimous front h contending that Brandt's policy is in line with Mr. Nixon's hope for shifting global politics confrontation to negotiation. As a result, U.S. sources say Washington endorses the principle of West German negotiation with the Soviet Uni. 1 and the Rast European allies. This much, at least, Mr. Nixon has either set. himself or has allowed to be mis in his name.

Beyond this point, however, the U.S. position becomes much less clear. While Washington approve the concept of negotiation, it is said, it has taken no stand on the specific negotiating tactics being pursued by Brandt, and it also is: reserving judgment on any pos-sible results from these negotia-

Open Options

Most neutral German political observers tend to interpret this vagueness as a deliberate attempt by the Nixon administration to keep its options open.

If Brandt's initiatives prove successful, they say, there still will he plenty of opportunity for Washington to embrace them. Conversely, if the Eastern policy goes off the tracks or turns in directions inimicable to U.S. interests Mr. Nixon currently is holding it at sufficient arm's length to disown the whole business.

Additionally, there do seem to be some definite cleavages in U.S. policy-making circles toward the Eastern policy. Some American officials are clearly optimistic about the chances for at least limited success, others are known to have nagging fears that Brandt will weaken the Western position without getting any substantial concossions in return, and still others regard it as such a long-range process that no clear-cut forecast can be made about its potential success or failure.

Undoubtedly, all of these fac-tors contribute to the ambiguity of the U.S. position and are likely to keep it so for some time to come. Now, the question is whether this ambiguity might provide the basis for a serious and even crippling assault on Brandt's East-

Vice-President Agnew's unprecedented silence about the sympathetic portrayal of violent resistance to the representatives of law and order in the current "Bus Sawyer" strip sets me wondering about what is going on in the administration.

Mr. Agnew has perhaps been too preoccupied with the hazards of lowered standards of excellence at the University of Michigan, or is he suffering from a false sense of security because of the acceptably

Secretary of the Interior Hicker's stlence is understandable, since one gathers the trees will be conserved although presumably not just for conservation's sake.

Perhaps the explanation for this apparent lapse of vigilance over the licentiousness and irresponsibility of the modern American press lies in President Nixon's recent Budget Message, in whose list of national priorities the end to polhition came before the stamping out of crime.

Since the example set by Buz Sawyer must have untold infloence on the thinking of the Silent Majority, it is high time the administration made perfectly clear its attitude to this portrayal of a conflict in values—civil disobedience, conservation, and the proper place of women. Otherwise, the Silent Majority may find itself somewhat up in the air, say, hang-ing precariously from a tree limb.

As a result, "Lassalle" has become something of a literary curiosity—banned in East Germany because of its political tinder and virtually ignored in the West. Both the West German edition of about 5,000 and the somewhat smaller English edition by Cassel and Co., entitled "Uncertain Friend." have remained sleepers, with little critical response. One American publisher is sitting on it.

Another curious aspect of "Lassalle" is that Mr. Heym, who emigrated to the United States in 1935, wrote the original in English and then translated It into German.

"I am somewhat disappointed," the 56-year-old author admitted. "I don't think Tassaile has been understood in the West." However, in the coterie of Heym admirers in Germany it is highly regarded, less for its political pertinence than for its literary qualities. 19th Century Atmosphere

He has succeeded not only in recreating the atmosphere of Germany in the mid-19th century, hut also the florid language that was common in the circles frequented by Lassalle. It is the equivalent of the Victorian era that produced the Gothie novels of English literature. which have no counterpart in German prose, Asked whether "Lassalle" was a labor of love, Mr. Heym retorted: "He was a bastard. But damn it, I got to like him. Maybe there is an affinity. He was a Jew and a revolutionary. I am a Jew and a Socialist, He was a fantastic character, not just one person but many combined, and he is all but forgot-Marx and Engels were sanctified. But nobody ever mentions Lassalle: I came to feel he was a fallen angel." For an American reader there is a piquant parall-1 between Mr. Heym's Lassalle and Alexander Fortnoy, the hero of Philip Roth's 'Portney's Com-

Back-to-the-Roots Rock or 100-Decibel Chamber Music

By Henry Pleasants

ONDON, April 16.—Creedence Clearwater Revival, out of San Francisco, making its first European tour, sold out the Royal Albert Hall two evenings running. It is the third of the major American rock groups to appear there this season; and, in public performance at least, it is also the hest.

performance at least, it is also the nest. Chicago Transit Authority was handicapped by a bad sound balance, and Crosby, Stills and Nash by sloppy stage deportment and haphazard program building. Creedence Clearwater Revival was refreshingly professional. These four young men—John Fogarty, lead guitar and lead singer; Tom Fogarty, rhythm guitar; Stu Cook, bass guitar; and Doug Clifford, drums—have been together for ten years. They know exactly what they are doing. They know how to do it, and when and for how long. And they know how to put it over.

They had the audience dancing in the aisles and in their seats Yes, in their seats. If you think that one can't dance sitting down, you have never experienced a rock concert where everything is going right. There was a roar of applause at the heginning and end of every number—all familiar from the group's three record albums—and finally an honest-to-goodness standing

Solid Rock

The descriptive adjective that kept running through my head as they played was "solid." They are not a fancy group. No striking personality, no showy virtuosity, no exhibitionism and not a trace of gimmickry. Nothing idiomatically or stylistically out of the way, either. Although the sounds are all their own, the treatment recalls either traditional rhythm and blues or traditional country and Western, played at the fashionable decibel count of

That's what the "revival" part of their name is about. Despite the high amplification and a heavy rock beat, this is a nostalgic music-nostalgic, that is, for those who grew up with Elvis Presley and Carl Perkins, or with Little Richard, Chuck Berry and Bo Diddley. It's a kind of back-to-the-roots rock, concerned not with rock as it is today, or as it may be tomorrow, but with the rock of rock 'n' roll and with the sources which converged in rock.

That's where the "Clearwater" comes in. It comes, actually, from a beer commercial which had the words "clear water, clear water" running through it. To the group this suggested the pure sources not of beer, but of rock. "Creedence" was the name of a mutual friend. It seemed appropriate to a music which has overtones of old-time faith and belief, so they kept it, odd spelling

Here, in any case, is a group which sounds in public performance just as it sounds on records, a group independent of the multiple tracking embellishments of record studios and reinforcement or substitution by session men. They reminded me of those fine musicians you hear backing Johnny Casb and Hank Snow, or B.B. King and Ray Charles-inconspicuous but indispensable, the difference being that in this case the ensemble liself is the

NEW YORK, April 16 (NYT).

—It was one of those evenings where everybody loved everybody else, but the most spectacular love song was re-served for the end, when Pablo Casals conducted 100 cellists on the stage of Philharmonic Hall in his own "Sardana." The occasion was a henefit concert for the American Symphony Orchestra free concerts for children and the United Nations International School. It was indeed an occasion, with parquet tickets priced at $125 (a gross of $151,000 was taken in). And, above all, 100 cellists.

They filed on stage after Leopold Stokowski, Beverly Sills and Rudolf Serkin had had their turn. They came from all over the United States, and from overseas as far as Denmark and Japan. All had paid their own way and donated their services for this "Salut Casals." Nobody -or at least hardly anybody, for the stunt has previously been done a few times-had seen so many live cellists in one place. An estimated $1 million worth of assorted Strads, Guarneri, Gofrillers and other highpriced instruments were part of the show.

The 93-year-old Casals first made his appearance after the 88-year-old Stokowski had conducted his - Stokowski's - arrangement for brass instru-ments of Casals's "O Vos Omnes:"

Depth, Dazzle in 'Zabriskie Point'

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss DARIS, April 16.-Misinformation-like bad news-travels swiftly and the derogatory reports on Antonioni's first American film, "Zabriskie Point," arrived here immediately after its New York premiere two months ago.

It may well be that critics in the United States were commenting on another version of this magnificent motion picture (now at the Concorde-Pathe. the Quartier-Latin and the Bilboquet in English; for otherwise it is impossible to understand the vehemence of their denunciations.

The most frequently voiced complaint was that the film's scenario was of an incomprehensible density. Perhaps in another editing it was, but in its present form it is clarity itself, a simple fable about the grandiose dreams of life's springtime set against the scene of contemporary campus unrest and granite Babbittry. A student at a California university, which has been occupied by a militant section of fellow scholars, tires of his col-leagues' Mao-Marxist conferences and decides to cut these classes. A rugged individualist, distrustful of organization, he is more of an anarchist than his comrades. He is, as he says, not afraid to die, but he refuses to be bored to death.

Riot Flares An ugly riot flares on the col-lege grounds and the non-conformist "hero" draws a revolver to fire on a policeman who is struck down by another shot. In panic the student flees and, stealing a tourist plane, soars over the city and makes off to the open spaces.

Landing at the outpost on the edge of Death Valley_the Zabriskie Pomt of the title—he encounters a young typist driving to an assignment at a business convention to be held at a neighboring resort. They are drawn to one another and consummate their passion in the desert sands. He flies hack to Los Angeles and, mistaken for the hunted assessin, is mowed down by a machine-gun volley on landing. The news of his death fills the head of his inamorata with apocalyptic visions of destroying modern civiliza-

Heated Drama

Antonioni with extraordinary artistry has embellished it with pictorial grandeur and quickened it with the throb of heated drama. The occupied universlty, seething with under-graduate hysteria; the hardsbelled, business-as-usual, aspect of the establishment figures; the lyric, primeval innocence of the erotic passages in the dusty wastelands with the single couple being multiplied into countless couples at amorous play; and the finale with the mountain luxury hotel being blown thy-high again and again reveal a cinematographic master. There is sardonic humor, too, in the concluding montage in which libraries, television sets and refrigerators are dynamited. the contents of an exploded icebox—lobsters and chickens— whirling about in slow motion.

But it is not alone in spectacles that Antonioni shines here. He has drawn a fascinating, if fantastic, picture of the America of the moment which, with all its obvious exaggerations, will novice actor, Mark Frechette, a carpenter recruited by chance in Boston, he has obtained a striking and sensitive performance that conveys the troubled restlessness, the untamed wildness and the questing wonder of the desperate, detached student of the script. Daria Halprin, also making her film debut, responds satisfactorily to the direction as the heroine, and there is the regulation performance of Rod Taylor impersonating a jolly tycoon.

"Zabriskie Point" has deptb as well as dazzle. It is a work of uncommon brilliance.

"Steamboat Bill, jr." is one of Buster Keaton's best and its present revival finds it in shipshape, still capable of rocking Made in 1928, it was one of the last of the silent masterpieces and seeing it today one realizes that an art has been lost. How vivid, how hilarious, how utterly winning and unpretentious it all is. One is inclined to curse the talkies for slowing and subduing laughter with needless dialogue.

The stone-faced Buster is scen here, fresh from Harvard's halls, when he is summoned back to his Mississippi home there to serve as second-incommand to his roughneck father, the captain of a dilapidated river tug. A wealthy ship owner threatens their trade and Buster's romance with his daughter, but a cyclone brings everyone together at the end of this wild and wonderful farce.

the younger generation and all his major comedies are being resurrected. On this occasion another memorable figure of the silent era makes his reappearance: Ernest Torrence, who plays Steamboat Bill sr. Torrence, a genial Scot, trained foc opera and long in the D'Oyly Carte Company, was called to Hollywood from the stage and his ability to east a mean eye won him prominence as a screen villain. He scored immediately as the hillbilly heavy in "Tol'able David," but his outstanding work came later as a superb character actor. It is high time to bring back some

Lower Profit Reports Are Held Responsible

By John J. Abele NEW YORK, April 16 (NYT).-

25.82 34.73 The gloom gathered a little deep-er on Wall Street today as prices on the New York Stock Exchange took another beating in a broadbased retreat that took its toll of blue-chip and glamour issues and a lot of stocks in between.

Price declines on the Big Board 0.46 led advances by a margin of almost 3-to-1. There were 940 losers against 350 winners—and the ex-14.85 change's composite index, the 1.71 broadest measure of market performance, slipped to a new low for the year, at 47.44, down 0.50 for the day and off 0.10 from the previous low of 47.54 on Jan. 10. The Dow Jones industrial average showed relatively minor losses for most of the session, but dropped sharply in the final bour.

1.63 closing with a decline of 6.73 at 775.87. Its low for the year, also set on Jan. 30, is 744.06. Principal losers among the Dow's 30 components were Aliled Chemical, which fell 1 1/2, to 21 5/8. after reporting a sharp drop in first-quarter earnings: International Paper, down a point, to 36 3/4, also on a decline in first-quarter profits; Eastman Kodak, down 1 5/8, to 74 1/2; Procter & Gamble. down 1 5/8, to 104 5.8, and U.S. Steel, down a point, to 37 5/8. Dn Pent Is Strong Du Pont was the only island of strength in the blue chips, adding 1 3/4, to 108 1/4. Earlier this week the big chemical company reported a decline in first-quarter earnings that was less than some analysts had expected. Actively traded issues again pre-0.48 sented a ragged appearance with 14 of the 15 most-active stocks posting losses. The only gainer was Ampex, which added 1/4, to 22 5/8. Market observers said prices were continuing to be affected by the drain of funds caused by American > well as reports of first-quarter earnings declines that apparently were more severe than rome investors had been expecting, "People are selling on bad news and not buying on good news," one stockbroker observed. The big funds are still dumping their hold-ings and the small investors don't

BRIDGE-

By Alan Truscott

The North-South partnership reached six spades as shown in the diagram, having begun with a cue-bid of two diamonds over one diamond. The lead was the same, but the play was quite different. South fell victim to a strange fear. He began werrying about the possibility that East held a doubleton club and would be shie to overruff dummy's eight with the nine,

Influenced by the fact that his team was heavily in arrests. and there was a desperate need for a swing, the declarer decided to work on the heart suit. This was a far worse plan theoretically than the club ruff. for a four-one heart division was far more likely than the combination of East having two ciubs and the spade nine.

A heart was led to dummy's nine, and East won with the king and correctly returned a trump to kill the club-ruff possibility. South won and led out trumps to reach this interesting ending:

Dummy threw a heart and East happily threw a diamond. The last trump was led, collecting hearts from West and North and another diamond from East. South then took the heart ace and the club king, collecting West's queen, and finessed the club eight at the 12th trick to make his slam.

JOYS AND SORROWS

Reflections by Pablo Casals, as told to Albert E. Kaha Simon & Schuster. 314 pp. $7.95.

Reviewed by Donal Henahan

DARLO CASATS is a saint, of course, and is now partly lost to us, hidden behind a haze of incense. Many years ago our leading cultural hagiographers recorded the canonization, and it is only through a tour de force of irreverence that one can think of the 93-year-old cellist as a person And yet, Casals is a man and resists quite stoutly. for a saint, the burial that sainthood entails.

Not that he does not help propagate his own myths. We all invent outselves as we go along, and a great man's myths about himself merely tend to stick better than most. And hence are somehow truer. What, indeed, is myth to be called when it happens to be literally true?

Although Casals has never written his autobiography, the as told to style of these memoirs has allowed him to compose a graceful reprise of his life, to sculpt a likeness of the Casals he wants remembered. So the story has an epic ring. But the men we wish to be are always much less complex and less fascinating than the men we actually are. Here, continually elbowing his way out of the epic, is a human being, his con-tradictions synthesized into a unity rare at any time, and preciously rare in ours.

Here is Casals, the lifelong friend of kings, queens and presidents and the unswerving republican and ally of the people: Casals the provincially solated child who began at age 12 to invent a radically better cello technique to replace the one that had grown up over two centuries. Here is Casals the Catalan so in love with his country that he had to abandon it after the Civil War and never consent to live there again, thus consigning Franco to moral exile, though affecting Spanish politics hardly at all: Casals, the intuitive genius whose musical ideas are opaquely mys-tical but who attracts colleagues and idolators from among the musical world's foremost intellects: This latter contradiction in

Casals, largely misunderstood, is thrown belpfully into relief by "Joys and Sorrows." Once as a child Casals was improvising at the plane for his patron, the Count de Morphy, and began to travel far afield harmonically. The musically sophisticated aristocrat reproached the boy gently: "Pablito; in the language of everybody. Yes?" Casals says he heard the words as "a profound utterance" and bas championed intuitive simplicity all his life. "It has always been my view that intuition is the decisive element in both the composing and the performance of music

No wonder that when he met Henri Bergson in Paris the ed to pump him about the role of intuition in music. No won-der, too that this blind (but not deaf) instinct, to which Casals has remained faithful during several swings in musical fashion, earned him a certain con-better schooled than he trans sicology and theory. Now, perhaps, his (which he does not arm well without a cello betwee knees) may be coming the perspective more clearly. Raise nality is momentarily on h defensive, and not only in sic. Discussing the interplay of magic and science in Savage Mind," the French in thropologist Claude Levi Strans suggests that the former is 100 a timid and stuttering formed science," but a metaphorical en pression of it. It is before therefore, rather than control. ing magic and science to conpare them as parallel modes of acquiring knowledge."

Thus, when Casals the conductor wants a certain rhapen dical kind of expression and exhorts his musicians to "play Jewish," his appeal to their in tuition is more effective and more intelligent in this instance than trying to communi-with scientific precision.

That however, is musical performance, on which Casals is an authority. Composing, tr which he also urges the applica tion of pure instinct, is some thing rather different, Beethe ven's instincts rarely led him directly to the truth, as the notebooks show, and many a his greatest works are model: of intellectual rigor. In his de fense we might say that intel lect is not a timid and stutter ing form of instinct, but some thing equally valuable. Which ! simply to suggest, now the magic and instinct are creeping back into fashion, that musi can no more survive losing it mind that it could its soul.

"Joys and Sorrows" is enlight ening in other areas, too, al though much of the remins cing will be fairly familiar from such earlier authors as J.M. Dor redor and Bernard Taper. The usual great-man's chronicle i here: the triumphs, the me mentary defeats, the betraya this friend Alfred Cortot collab orated with the Nazis); the en: counters with the mighty th. homage bestowed by nation and publics. He knew everyone of course: Gertrude Stein, Albeniz, Saint-Saëns, Sarasat John P. Kennedy, Tedd Roosevelt, Kreisler.

Albert E. Kahn, an okfriend of Casals and a politica sympathizer since the Spanis' Civil War days, provides man photographs of his man (in the expert fashion familiar for his "Days of Ulanova"). He pleces together the text fruit his "Little for the first fruit his together the text fruit his first fr taped conversations and fror notes taken on travels wit, ... Corn Off the Cob is now rated third choice at 7 to 2 off his close races with My Dad George in Florida, but Finney is not smitten, either, with that colt. He dis-missed him almost summarily. "Good heavens. I hope nothing with a name like that wins the Derby, it wouldn't be right," said the traditionalist. In Kentucky on Tuesday, Finney sew another Derby candidate, Charles Englebard's Protanto win a seven-furlang race, but he doubted if that victory moved the colt up much. "I saw the boy hit him a couple of times and the cost ducked out badly," said Finney. "At the finish Mack Miller, the trainer, was shaking his head as if he was not well impressed." One that may be hiding, Finney suggested, was Aggressively, another California colt "that has been slow cooling to hand." He pointed out that Aggressively is owned by George Pope, "whn never sends anything to the Derby that doesn't have a chance." Pope's Decidedly won it in 1962. and his Hill Rise missed by only a neck

"He's bred to go," Finney said, "and he looked good finishing third in a shorter race Saturday." If Naskra had any horse of the year notions, he has been getting a late start. He was a late scratch in both the Flamingo and the Florida Derby. Unless he proves something at Churchill Downs, the extent of Naskra's fame may be scratch of the year.

In Making Bids For '76 Olympics

By Harry Trimborn MOSCOW, April 16.-The Soviet Union's top Olympic official today accused Los Angeles and Montreal of violating the Games' ideals by coping to crass commercialism in their efforts to secure the 1976 Summer Olympics.

The accusation by Konstantin Adrianov represents a Soviet escalation in the war of words over the Games site as the date for its election draws near. The International Olympics Comnittee meets in Amsterdam May 12 to make the choice. The two North American cities are Moscow's chief ivals in the competition. Until now, Soviet Olympic officials have avoided direct attacks on Moscow's rivals, preferring to ac-centuate what they consider the advantages of holding the Games in the Soviet capital. Comedy Breaks Out

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON. - What a strange time. Nothing seems quite real especially in Washington. These statesmen, are they really to be taken seriousir: Rep. Ford. for instance of MIchigan, Republican leader of the House. A most serious gentleman, Not one in steep to jokes, surely. And yet. Well, here he is

Baker staring out of the telly waving a copy of Evergreeo, a magazine made famous-to the extent that it is famous-by Barburella, a comic-sado-masochistle cartoon character. Now look here, says Rep. Ford, with his extremely serious face. We are going to have to impeach Justice William O. Douglas, because, you see, he is allowing this Evergreen magazine, which I hold right here in my hand, to publish his

Surely. Rep. Ford cannot he serious. In spite of his serious face and his reputation for years of seriousness in the performance of his public duty. Even ii there be something loathsome or odlous to Blackstone, something smacking of judicial mal-feasance, in Justice Douglas's choosing to publish in Evergreen-even if that be the case, surely Rep. Ford cannot want to have his President confronted with yet another vacant seat ou the court. Can Rep. Ford, one wonders, he teasing the President? ("Hey. Mr. President, did you catch me on TV tonight? How'd you like to have another Haynsworth-Carswell go-around on Bili Douglas's seat?"1 Playful dig of elbow into presidential ribs.

And the President? Cao he be serious, standing there staring out of the telly, telling the Senate they won't have Dixie to kick around anymore because gentlemen, Carswell is his last Southern nominee to the court? The Senate kicking the South around, Mr. President? The Senate, without the famous filibusters of which Jim Crow would never have had a chance of surviving into the 1950s? The indifference of which on civil rights we might have moved on to doing something about the race issue years before anyone had ever heard of Earl Warren?

Senate, without the reichrated

It is a slight joke to be told nt the attorney general's, Mr. President, but not on television. Surely, the President is not being serious.

And speaking of the attorney general, Mrs. Mitchell is surely not being serious, there on the telephone talking to the Cazette of Little Rock. Ark., in the ashen hours between midnight and dawn.

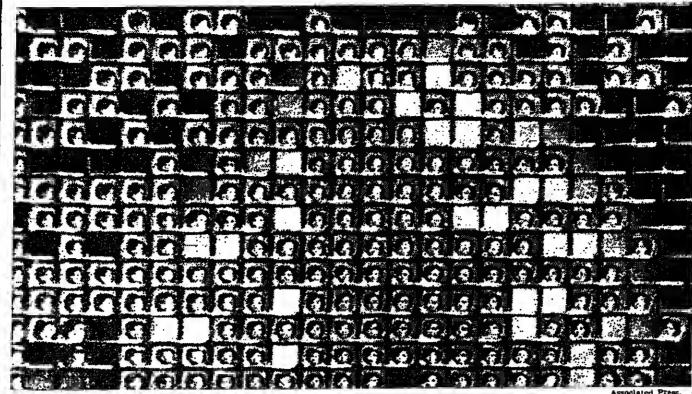

You can tell from her lines that it must be a put-on. Nobody has proposed a political crucifixion in this country since William Jennings Bryan, the silver-tongued orator of the Platte, told the forgotten man of the Gaslight Age that Wall Street couldn't crucify him on a cross of gold. (He was wrong. Wall Street could and did.)

Republicans-Mrs. Mitchell is one-have ever since had a smile and jest for orotund rhetoric of the silver-tonguedorator - of - the-Platte variety. One of them once observed that lhe Platte was a river six inches deep and two miles wide at the mouth, Surely Mitchell could not have been serious, then, in urging that Sen, Fulbright-Sen, Fulbright? -be crucified on the high-speed press.

And Gov. Kirk, that dynamic Floridian, Can he he serious, standing there staring out of the telly at the hospital? Why a hospital? Well, you see, he is in the maternity ward. Mrs. Kirk has just been delivered of B child, And the governor is there playing—really now, this has all the outward trappings of being serious-playing George Wallace at the schoolhouse door.

Surely the governor cannot be serious. Surely Rep. Ford can-not be serious. Nor President Nixon. Nor Mrs. Mitchell. It is a sohering thought, but it had hetter he said: All these people very probably believe they are being serious. Maybe the silly season has come early this year. In any case, things are bound to improve. Or so some optimist invariably insists. In deflance of reason.

-In 1962, Isaac Bashevis Singer wrote a short story celled "The Soo," which told of his meeting with his son. whom he bad not seen in 20 years.

Now the son-Israel Zamir (Hebrew for Singer)-has published his own version of the encounter, in the Tel Aviv newspaper Albamishmar.

The son was five years old when Singer left Poland for America in 1935, abandoning his wife and the hoy. When the son—a 25-year old member of kibbutz-came to New York for B visit, his father was walting for him at dockside.

A Son's Story The ship was late, I. B. Singer wrote. He waited. He recalled that the boy's mother had opted to go to Soviet Russia instead to America. She and the boy then moved to Turkey, and finally managed to reach Palestine,

The boy's account recalled that he had known his father

only from B few letters and from his mother's accounts.

"He wanted to come close to me and he found that he was offending me. His Hebrew was strange, a mixture of talmudic language and the Hebrew of the enlightenment. I was embarrassed by his style and I destroyed his letters. Sometimes for Rosh Hashanah (new year's) or for a birthday he would send me a few dollars, possibly when was overcome hy a feeling of fatherhood or guilt," Zamir writes in his story. The son felt no affection for his father and rarely thought about him. "I imagined him as one of those American tourists who come to the kibbutz, with a luxurious car, and through its window you can see the back of a fat neck . . . and the man stays for B short while, praises everything in a very loud voice, spreads boyish smiles all over the place, and leaves as he came, in B cloud of dust, amid the children's dreams about the magical life across the ocean." Zamir had sent n photo-but

The composer of the ballad "Welfare Cadillac," Gny Drake. was thrown into the hoosegow Wednesday at Benton, Ky., for passing a rubber check to the Boyd Motor Company for a used car—a 1968 Buick, Robert Boyd, owner of the company, signed the warrant for Drake's arrest, charging him with issuing a $750 bad check for the car, purchased Oct. 17, 1968. Drake's new song is that he thought the debt had been settled long ago. He is being beld until he can post

A Church of England curate who leaped onto the stage and danced with the nude cast during Wednesday night's opening performance of Hair Liverpool, said Thursday that "it was an exuberant moment. The human body is a beautiful thing," The Rev. Christopher Smith, 25, said he thought that "the nude scene was not in the least offensive." "I went to the play for the hell of it," he

Edward Elsom, 27, declared his candidacy for district attorney of Madison, Wis, He went to the news conference nude and bared his platform, which included loosening of restraints on nudity and usage of marijuana. His wife, who was there, listened attentively as did police inspector Herman Thomas, Elsom, who
